PREFATORY NOTE.

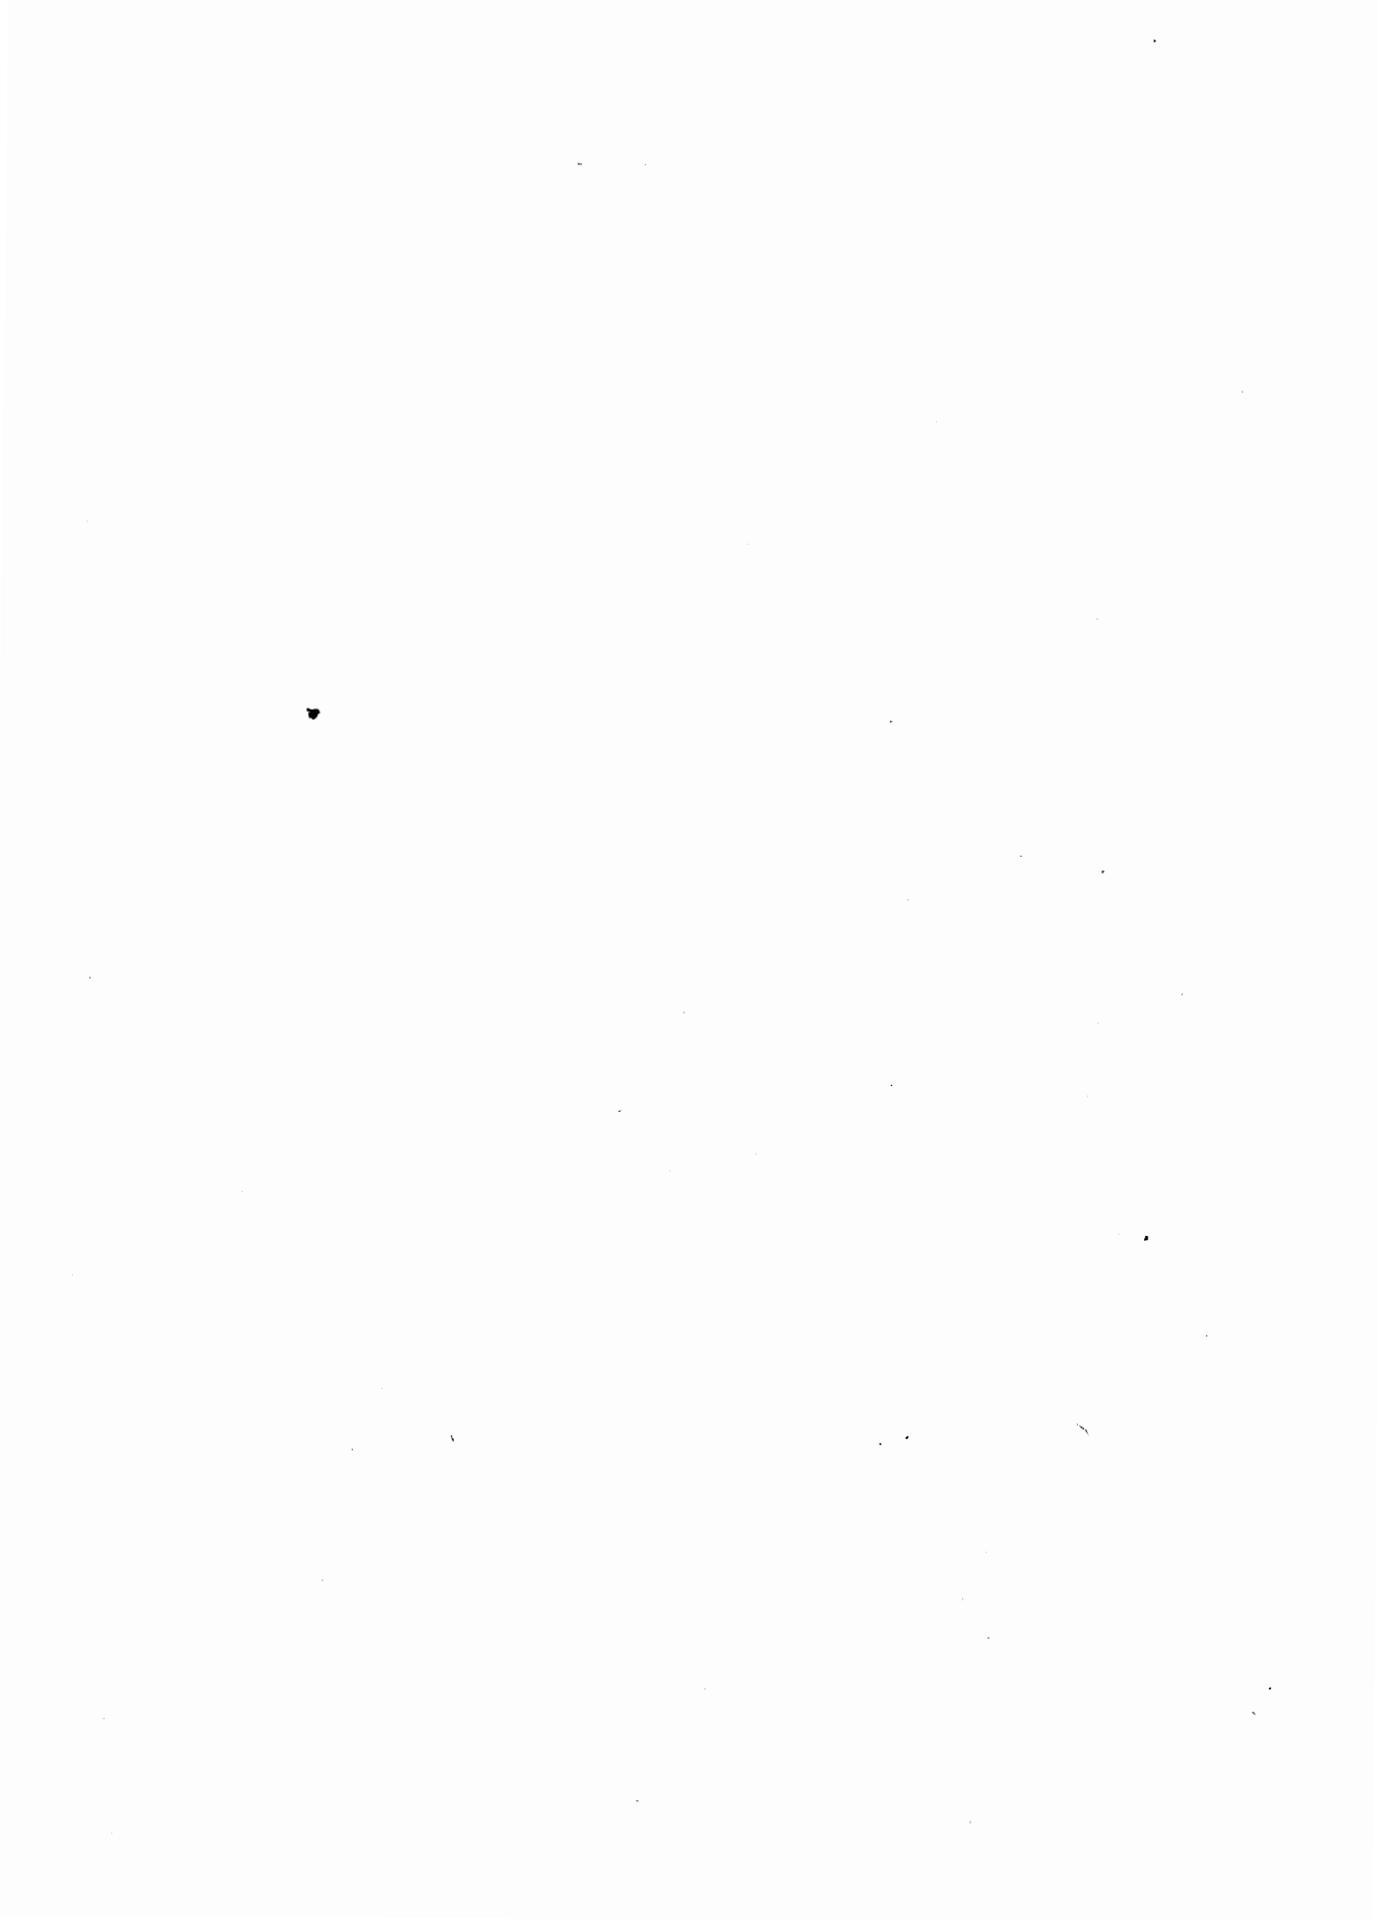

PALESTRINA's setting of the Hymn "Stabat Mater" would seem, from an inscription in a MS. Collection of Motets in the Archives of the Papal Choir written by Luca Orfei, of Fano, to have been composed for Pope Gregory XIV. (1590-1592). The work remained for long in manuscript and was jealously guarded as the special property of the choir for which it was written, and by which it was sung every year at High Mass on Palm Sunday. In A. Adami da Bolsena's "Osservazioni per ben regolare il Coro dei Cantori della Cappella Pontificia" (Rome, 1711), it is directed that care shall be taken that the Offertory on Palm Sunday shall be said sufficiently slowly to allow the motet "Stabat Mater Dolorosa" for double chorus, by Palestrina, to be sung Adagio, "of which it is the custom to sing the first part only, but at a very leisurely pace" ("assai agitatamente"). A copy was obtained by Dr. Burney, probably through Cavaliere Santarelli, on his visit to Rome in 1770, and it is to the English historian that the first printed edition is due. This appeared at London in "La Musica che si canta annualmente nelle Funzioni della Settimana Santa nella Capella Pontificia" (1771). Since then the work has been frequently re-printed, amongst others, by Richard Wagner, whose edition was first published in 1877.

The text of the present edition has been derived from that in Vol. VI. of the complete collection of Palestrina's works, edited by Dr. Haberl, F. Espagne, and others. The original clefs are as follows :—

These, for the convenience of modern choirs, have been represented by the ordinary G and F clefs now in use. The time signature of the First Part—Imperfect time, with the lesser prolation—has been retained, as equivalent to the modern Alla Breve; but the opening movement of the Second Part, marked in the original $\Phi\ 3$ —i.e., Perfect time, with the greater prolation—has been altered to its modern equivalent, $\frac{2}{3}$. A compressed score has also been added which may be used for practice, though it is to be understood that the work should never be performed except without accompaniment. The original contains no directions as to time or expression. The Editor is solely responsible for those to be found in the present edition, which have been introduced in accordance with the traditional use of the Papal Choir, as well as for the addition of a few accidentals, which have been placed within brackets. The introduction of solo voices in certain passages will be found to heighten the effect of the work, but there is no reason why the whole composition should not be sung as a chorus. Especial care has been taken to preserve the antiphonal character of the music, a feature which is destroyed in Richard Wagner's edition, and liberty as to tempo has been left to the taste of individual conductors by the addition of two sets of metronome marks, between which limits it is suggested the tempi shall be adopted in performance. With regard to the words, there are so many different versions of the Hymn that it is difficult to decide upon any correct text. That used by Palestrina is not now to be found in any authorized Liturgy, and it has therefore been thought best, in the present edition, to follow in every respect the version to be found in the Roman Breviary, published at Ratisbon in 1890. For concert performances, however, the words actually set by the composer may be preferred. These have therefore been added in italics below the modern authorised version.

A musical score for four voices (SATB) in G major, featuring five systems of music with lyrics in Latin. The score consists of five systems of music, each with a treble clef, a key signature of one sharp, and a common time signature. The vocal parts are arranged in a four-line staff system. The lyrics are in Latin and are repeated in each system.

System 1:
