The musical score consists of six staves of music. The top staff is for the Piano, featuring two staves: Treble C-clef and Bass F-clef. The first section of the piano part is dynamic 'p' (pianissimo). The second section starts with dynamic 'pp' (pianississimo) and includes vocal entries for 'Count di Luna.' and 'Ah!' sections. The viola and bassi parts are also present in the piano's staves. The subsequent staves are for the voice and orchestra. The vocal parts are in soprano and basso. The orchestra includes strings (VI. II. and VI. I.), woodwind (Viola and Bassi), and brass (Str.). The vocal parts sing in Italian, with lyrics provided in English below the Italian text. The music is set in common time, with various dynamics and performance instructions like 'molten-te' and 'gleaming' used to describe the sound effects.
