THE DAILY TELEGRAPH.

There are choruses in "Ruth" which surprise the candid and intelligent observer, to whom the natural bent of the composer's genius is no secret. Here, indeed, we have the handler of the goldsmith's delicate tools wielding the hammer of Thor and bringing it down to some purpose, revealing strength, energy, and decision for the exact measure of which few could have been prepared. . . . There now remains only to congratulate the composer upon a successful achievement, and upon the favour with which the work was obviously received by a profoundly attentive audience.

THE MORNING POST.

There is beautiful music enough in "Ruth" to make the reputation of the composer had it not already been made.

THE DAILY NEWS.

No better subject for his first essay could have been afforded than that which he has chosen. The pretty pastoral idyl of "Ruth" was exactly what was needed for the exercise of his graceful fancy, his vein of refined and winning melody, and his skill in delicate picturesque orchestration.

THE DAILY CHRONICLE.

Mr. Frederic Cowen's Oratorio "Ruth" is in every way creditable to British musical art. It is a worthy addition to the list of works with which we may "speak with the enemies in the gate" and "not be ashamed."

THE GLOBE.

There could be no doubt of the success which Mr. Cowen has in this instance achieved. . . . It is a work which will worthily sustain the great reputation honourably won by its composer.

THE SUNDAY TIMES.

As regards originality, loftiness of aim and achievement, and freedom and force of expression, it is head and shoulders above any choral work that has previously issued from the same pen.

THE SCENE IS LAID IN NORWAY, 10TH CENTURY.

Between Acts I. and II. an interval of three years is supposed to elapse. Between Acts III. and IV. an interval of three months.

ARGUMENT.

Act I.—Harald Fair-hair, King of Norway, making a progress through his dominions, visits Jarl Eric, in Rogaland. The festivities which celebrate his arrival are interrupted by a quarrel between Eric's "love-born" son, Thorgrim, and Helgi, his son by Arnora, his wife. Consequent upon this, the King shows favour to Thorgrim, attracted by the youth's bold and manly bearing. Arnora, jealous for Helgi, instigates his partisans among Eric's people to the murder of Thorgrim; which purpose they attempt to carry out when Thorgrim, insulted by one of their number, Sweyn, takes the life of the offender. The King and his guards intervene, and, at the request of Eric, Harald accepts Thorgrim as one of his own men.

Act II.—The King, having summoned his principal Jarls to a council, receives them, their ladies and attendants, with much ceremony. Among the guests are Eric, Arnora and Helgi. Last to appear are Jarl Thorir and his daughter, Olof Sunbeam, the promised wife of Helgi. Thorgrim falls in love with Olof at first sight, and in his masterful way, so ingratiates himself with the maiden that he is permitted to conduct her to the feast. When left alone, Arnora reproaches Helgi with his supineness as a lover, and is answered in terms which show that Helgi conceives himself to be, as against Thorgrim, the victim of a relentless and irresistible fate. Stung by his mother's reproaches, he, however, professes a resolve to meet Thorgrim where the sword shall arbitrate between them. When all the guests have again assembled, Thorgrim, with whom action promptly follows thought, demands of Thorir the hand of his daughter. Thorir refuses on the ground that he has already promised it. Thorgrim then appeals to the King, and, on Harald declining to interfere between a father and his child, passionately declares that he will no longer serve as King's man. He at once departs; but threatens to return and reckon with all who dispute his will.

Act III.—Olof indulges her grief for Thorgrim (whose love she returns) in a pine forest near her father's hall. After she has dismissed her attendant women, Thorgrim enters. The interview of the lovers is seen by a follower of Helgi, who hastens to inform his master. Meanwhile, Thorgrim acquaints Olof with his design to gather warriors and ships, and proceed to the West Isles as a Viking. He obtains her promise to obey whenever he shall summon her to his side. Their interview is finally interrupted by the appearance of Arnora and Helgi. Helgi rushes at his rival sword in hand, but, seized with sudden fear, halts, swerves, and leans trembling upon his weapon.

Act IV.—It is Yule-tide, and the marriage of Helgi and Olof is about to take place. The guests have assembled in Thorir's Fire-hall, and the ceremony is on the point of beginning, when Thorgrim suddenly enters. He challenges Helgi to decide their quarrel by single combat—an issue which the bridegroom evades. Next, he once more demands Olof of her father, and calls upon her to leave Helgi and stand at his side. She obeys. Eric intercedes for the lovers, but Thorir holds a promise sacred and once more refuses. At a signal from Thorgrim, his men, who have entered unobserved amidst the excitement, extinguish the lights in the hall. Favoured by darkness and confusion, Thorgrim and Olof escape, and are presently seen on board a ship which makes her way out to sea. Helgi and the warriors present would pursue with Thorir's ships, but the doors of the hall are held in force by Thorgrim's men. The curtain descends as the receding voices of the lovers are heard in a strain from the love-music of the third Act.

The story of the Opera is founded upon an episode in the ancient Icelandic tale, "Viglund the Fair."

A musical score for organ, featuring two staves of five-line notation. The first staff uses vertical dashes for bass notes and vertical strokes for treble notes. The second staff uses vertical dashes for bass notes and vertical strokes for treble notes. Measure 11 starts with a forte dynamic (f) and a bass note. Measure 12 begins with a dynamic of "sempre f". The instruction "colla voce." appears above the staves. Measure 13 starts with a forte dynamic (ff). The instruction "Ped." appears below the staves.

(Exit slowly.)

A musical score page showing two staves. The top staff is for the orchestra, featuring a treble clef, a key signature of one sharp, and a time signature of common time (indicated by '3'). It consists of two measures of music. The first measure begins with a sixteenth-note pattern followed by eighth notes. The second measure starts with a bass note marked with an asterisk (). The bottom staff is for the piano, indicated by a treble clef and a bass clef bracket. It also has a key signature of one sharp and a time signature of common time (indicated by '3'). The piano part consists of two measures. The first measure features eighth-note patterns on both the treble and bass staves. The second measure begins with a bass note marked with an asterisk (). Various dynamics are indicated throughout, including 'dim.', 'pp' (pianissimo), and 'poco rit.'. The page number '10' is visible at the bottom right.
