

Copyright Secured 3^d September 1845
Publication deposited same day

THOU HAST WOUNDED THE SPIRIT THAT LOV'D THEE

Ballad

The Poetry Written by

M. H. Carpenter Esq.

The Music Composed & Arranged

FOR THE

Piano Forte

BY

ALEXANDER BALL.

BALTIMORE,

Published by Frederick D. Benteen.

Pr. 25 Cts. Net.

THOU HAST WOUNDED THE SPIRIT THAT LOV'D THEE.

Written by W. H. CARPENTER.

Andante con Espressione.

PIANO

p dolce.

Thou hast

dim.

wounded the spirit that lov'd thee, And widow'd the heart once thine; — The

mf

smiles that to rapture once mov'd thee, No more on my pale face shine. — As a ad lib.

star in the night of thy sad - - - - - ness, My love would have lent its ray — My

p ad lib.

tempo.

voice would have greeted with glad - - - - - ness The noon of thine happier day.

p Calando.

Colla voce.

2nd VERSE.

But the

p dim.

words which thy false lips have spo - - - - - ken Have sever'd love's gol - - - - - den chain; And now the bright links rudely bro - - - ken May never u - - nite a - - - gain. Thou wilt seek out some loftier maid - - - en, But nev - er find one more true Than a tempo. Ritardando.

mf

she, who love - lost though love - la - - - den, Breathes sad - ly her last a - - - dieu.

dim.