MORNING HEROES A SYMPHONY FOR ORATOR, CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA

LIE STREWN THE WHITE FLOCKS PASTORAL

"The real worth of the composition . . . is found in the comforting assurance it provides that Mr. Bliss means to go his own way and to express his own thoughts without first consulting the latest fashion bulletin. Complex as the score is in parts, it never betrays foreign influences. The general character is, above all, sane and virile, and what sentiment there is frank, and not presented under the form of intellectual exercises."—The Daily Telegraph

"This beautiful work was remarkable for a richness and breadth of feeling which created a profound impression . . . This well-wrought and brilliantly written composition."—The Morning Post

"A work of proud and accomplished craftsmanship."—The Observer

"The writing is richly effective and so skilful that it gives the ear an impression of even greater opulence in the part writing than is actually employed."—Liverpool Daily Post

"The work is rich in invention and highly skilled in its handling, and a valuable addition to our too scanty repertory of significant works for strings."—The Sunday Times

"A work that constantly discloses new beauties as it becomes familiar. The great thing about Bliss's music, compared with many modern works, is that it has feeling and they have not."—Sound Wave

"This extremely beautiful work is idyllic in the first movement, romantic and passionate in the second and fourth, elegiac in the third. It is English music, and needs very little hearing to convince one of its beauty."—New Statesman and Nation

"An outstanding achievement in a form that has attracted few composers . . . an extremely attractive musical work."—Liverpool Daily Post

"There is great depth of thought and great technical inventiveness. This is undoubtedly one of the finest works from an English composer in recent years."—Halifax Weekly Courier and Guardian

"One appreciates the depth of thought that lies behind mere technical contrivance. There is a spiritual sensibility in his music, an utter absence of either ponderousness or triviality, that point to an insight and balance rare in our day."—The Gramophone

"A masterpiece of rare distinction, so beautifully made that one is immediately aware that it contains not a note too little or a note too much."—Saturday Review

"A masterpiece had its first performance last night. Mr. Bliss is now able to say the things that belong to the great music of every age."—Daily Telegraph

"The composer has created a beautiful thing with perfect ease."—Morning Post

"Asked yesterday how many great Clarinet Quintets there are, one would have counted Mozart, Brahms, and—what else? To-day one would say without hesitation: Mozart, Brahms, and Bliss."—Birmingham Post

"The first thing that strikes one is that inevitability which is the mark of spontaneous musical thinking . . . The newness of it is not due to a laborious search after the unheard of, but rather, it seems, to an unaccountable forgetfulness on the part of the vital composers of the past, who carelessly omitted to say those fine things which Arthur Bliss has now said for us . . ."—Manchester Guardian

" . . . The most inspiring moments are those in which the composer reveals his mastery in the handling of choral and orchestral masses."—Daily Telegraph

"Some parts of the work, and notably the superb 'Achilles goes forth to battle,' are as fine as anything that English music has produced in recent years. There can be no question that at last the real Bliss has found himself."—Sunday Times

Vocal Score, 4s. Full Score and Parts on hire only

"The choral writing is in the true English tradition, and the musical idiom in general is entirely straightforward . . . The most sincere and musical expression of lyrical personality that I have heard from an English composer for a long time."—Morning Post

"The new work is extraordinarily attractive. The reapers sing boisterously, the naiads dreamily; Echo discourages the love-lorn shepherd, and in 'The Pigeon Song' a flute adds charming decorations to a girl's amorous ditty. The composer's freshness and inventiveness well match the excellent verses."—Daily Mail

"'A Hymn to Pan' and its rejoinder, 'Pan and Echo,' were fine examples of musical story-telling. The section, too, devoted to 'The Naiads' Music' is a masterpiece of construction."—Yorkshire Evening Post

FOREWORD

THE following lyric was written some six centuries ago by a Yorkshire poet, Richard Rolle, of Hampole, hermit and saint, and one of the greatest of our English mystics.

In the text here printed, the spelling has been modernized, but the old vocabulary has been left unchanged. Explanations of archaic words, etc., are given in the footnotes.

J. H. G. G.

The accompaniment in the vocal score is an arrangement of the full orchestral score, adapted for performance on an organ of good quality. The registration is merely suggestive. In cases when a full orchestral accompaniment is not possible, an examination of the full score is strongly recommended, for this would show how the addition of a few orchestral instruments enhances the organ version. The tempo indications are not intended to be rigidly adhered to ; movement, flow, must always be maintained. "Aliveness" in tone will avoid any sense of dragging, no matter how subdued the tone may be.

JHESU CHRIST, SAINT MARY'S SONE

Version by FRANCES M. COMPER

From 'The Life and Lyrics of Richard Rolle.' (J. M. Dent & Sons, Ltd.)

Jhesu Christ, Saint Mary's Sone,¹
Through whom this world was worthily wrought,

I pray thee come and in me wone,²
And of all filths cleanse my thought.

Jhesu Christ, my God veray,³
That of our dear Lady was born,
Thou help now ever and aye,
And let me never for sin be lorn.⁴

Jhesu Christ, God's Son of heaven,
That for me died on the rood,
I pray thee hear my simple steven,⁵
Through (the) virtue of thy holy blood.⁶

Jhesu Christ, that on the third day
From death to life rose through thy might,
Thou give me grace thee serve to pay,⁷
And thee to worship day and night.

Jhesu of whom all goodness springs,
Whom all men owe⁸ to love by right,
Thou make me to yeme⁹ thy biddings,
And them fulfil with all my might.

Jhesu Christ, that tholed¹⁰ for me
Pains and angers,¹¹ bitter and fell,¹²
Let me never be parted fro' thee,
Nor thole the bitter pains of hell.

(vv. 7, 8, and 9 omitted.)

Jhesu, that with thy blood me bought,
Jhesu, thou make me clean of sin,
And with thy love thou wynde¹³ my thought,
And let me never (mare) fro' thee twin.¹⁴

Jhesu I covet to love thee
And that is wholly my yearning ;
Therefore to love thee thou learn me,
And I thy love shall sing.

(1) Sone : son. The word should be pronounced as in modern Yorkshire dialect, viz.: son with the same vowel as in standard English pull, push. The word wone has the same vowel pronunciation.

(2) wone : dwell.

(3) veray : true. (Note that in the 14th century the accent fell on the final syllable, as in our word away.)

(4) lorn : lost (cf. forlorn.)

(5) steven : voice. Rhymes with heaven, not with even.

(6) blood : to be pronounced with the same vowel as in rood not to rhyme with mud.

(7) i.e., to serve thee to thy satisfaction.

(8) owe to love by right : ought by rights to love.

(9) yeme : heed.

(10) tholed : endured.

(11) angers : griefs, hardships.

(12) fell : cruel.

(13) wynde : enwrap. (The word should rhyme with "blind.")

(14) twin : separate.

Jhesu, thy love in to me send,
And with thy love thou me feed.
Jhesu, thy love ay in me lend.¹⁵
Thy love ever be my sawl's meed.¹⁶

Jhesu, my heart with love thou light.¹⁷
Thy love make me ever to forsake
All worldly joy, both day and night.
And joy in thee ainly¹⁸ to make.

Jhesu, thy love me chafe¹⁹ within
So that na thing but Thee I seek :
In thy love make my sawl to brin²⁰
Thy love me make baith mild and meek.

Jhesu, my joy and my loving,²¹
Jhesu, my comfort clear,²²
Jhesu my God, Jhesu my king,
Jhesu withouten peer.

Jhesu that all has made of nought,²³
Jhesu that bought me dear,
Jhesu join thy love in my thought
So that they never be sere.²⁴

Jhesu, my dear and my drury,²⁵
Delight thou art to sing :
Jhesu, my mirth and my melody,
Into thy love me bring.

(v. 18 omitted.)

Jhesu, in thy love wynde my thought,
And lift my heart to thee,
Jhesu my sawl, that thou dear bought,
Thy lover make it to be.

Now Jhesu, Lord, thou give me grace,
If it be thy will,
That I may come unto that place,
And wone ay with thee still.

Amen.

(15) lend : abide, tarry.

(16) Sawl's meed : soul's reward.

(17) light : illumined.

(18) ainly : only.

(19) chafe : make warm.

(20) brin : burn.

(21) i.e., the object of my love.

(22) clear : bright, unsullied, pure.

(23) i.e., who has made everything from nothing.

(24) sere : separated.

(25) drury : darling.

Songs of Springtime

SEVEN ELIZABETHAN POEMS

Set to Music for MIXED CHORUS (S.A.T.B.)

By E. J. MOERAN

1. Under the Greenwood Tree - - - Shakespeare
2. The River-God's Song - - - Fletcher
3. Spring, the sweet Spring - - - Thomas Nashe
4. Love is a sickness - - - Samuel Daniel
5. Sigh no more, Ladies - - - Shakespeare
6. Good Wine - - - William Browne
7. To Daffodils - - - Herrick

PRICE COMPLETE, TWO SHILLINGS
EACH SONG MAY BE HAD SEPARATELY

Mr. ERNEST NEWMAN, in The Sunday Times :—" Here is finely imaginative music, turned out, in addition, with exquisite craftsmanship. If these things had been broadcast under the names of Marenzio, Morley, and any five other composers of the madrigalian epoch, the general verdict would probably have been that these ancient gentlemen were writing at the top of their form, if not, indeed, a bit above it."
