The flow'r will court the rising sun, Al-though he steals its dew a-way; So

I to thee with fondness look, And with-er in thy dazzling ray.

2.

I'm still thine own, I'm still thine own,
 Tho' thou dost smile on all but me;
 The voice that makes so many proud,
 To me is rich with melody.
 In courtly halls thou art the star
 That dims the light of all the rest;
 And tho' I smile, yet none can tell
 The grief that struggles in my breast.
